

The image features two tall, slender, and highly decorative towers, likely the spires of Gaudí's Sagrada Família in Barcelona. The towers are covered in intricate mosaic work, primarily in shades of yellow, orange, and red, with some white and grey accents. The top of each tower is crowned with a large, circular, sun-like motif, possibly representing the sun and moon. The towers are set against a clear, bright blue sky. The overall style is characteristic of Catalan Modernisme.
