

Hanns-
Josef
Ortheil
Wie ich Klavier-
spielen
lernte

Insel

A photograph of a dark-colored upright piano that has been severely damaged and dismantled. The piano is the central focus, with its lid open and its internal mechanism exposed. The keys are visible but appear to be in a state of disrepair. The piano is surrounded by a large amount of debris, including wooden planks, metal shavings, and other fragments, suggesting it has been broken apart. The background is a plain, light-colored wall, and the floor is covered in the same debris. The overall scene conveys a sense of destruction and abandonment.